What the Leaders Are Doing and
What People Have to Say About Them.

Don't forget to vote next Tuesday.

Emanuel Abrahams, Democratic Aldermanic nominee in the Twentieth Ward, and Samuel Golden, Socialist, will fight it out in April for a Council seat.

The election board, by a 2 to 1 vote, cast out the independent petition filed by Henry L. Flick. Commissioners Kellerman and Taylor voted in favor of giving Abrahams a clear field. Commissioner Czarnecki voted in favor of Flick. William Melody, the Republican candidate, withdrew several days ago.

Vote for Flynn for City Treasurer and be with the winner.

Two hundred and fifty-nine voting machines will not be available for use in the April elections as a result of the action of Charles H. Mitchell, attorney for the board of election commissioners, in withdrawing his motion for the release of the machines involved in legislative contests before Circuit Judge Baldwin.

The machines were originally impounded by the court pending a decision on allowing the contests to proceed. A sub-committee from the legislature appointed to conduct the recount found the outer seals of three machines were broken. The recount was at once stopped until the sub-committee could report to the full committee on elections at Springfield.

Attorney Mitchell informed the court that the board desired to withdraw its motion, as it would be impossible to inspect them all in the limited time available before election.

Vote for Francis D. Connery for City Clerk.

Homer E. Tinsman's candidacy for Superior Court Judge on the Republican ticket is a worthy one. He is a man fitted in every way for a seat on the bench. His clean and able record is well known to everybody and he would make a splendid judge.

Alderman Edward F. Cullerton will romp in with his usual big plurality on April 1 in the Eleventh ward. The voters are proud of their honest and able representative in the City Council.

John M. O'Connor has made a splendid state senator and he would make a splendid Superior Court judge.

The appointment of Judge Edward Osgood Brown to the Federal bench would please every Chicagoan.

Harry H. Lampert's candidacy for alderman in the twenty-third ward is daily growing in strength. All factions of Democrats are with him to a standstill, and his fine record has won for him the support of all classes of citizens irrespective of party affiliation.

Alderman Irwin R. Hazen is a certain winner for re-election in the thirty-third ward. He will receive the solid Republican vote and half the Democratic and Progressive vote.

Alderman Henry D. Capitain will be triumphantly returned on April 1. The voters of the twenty-fifth ward know the splendid record he has made in the city council, and they are not going to retire a worthy public servant like him just to please the whims of a few office-seeking reformers. Alderman Capitain has made good in every way during his first term and the people know it and are proud of him.

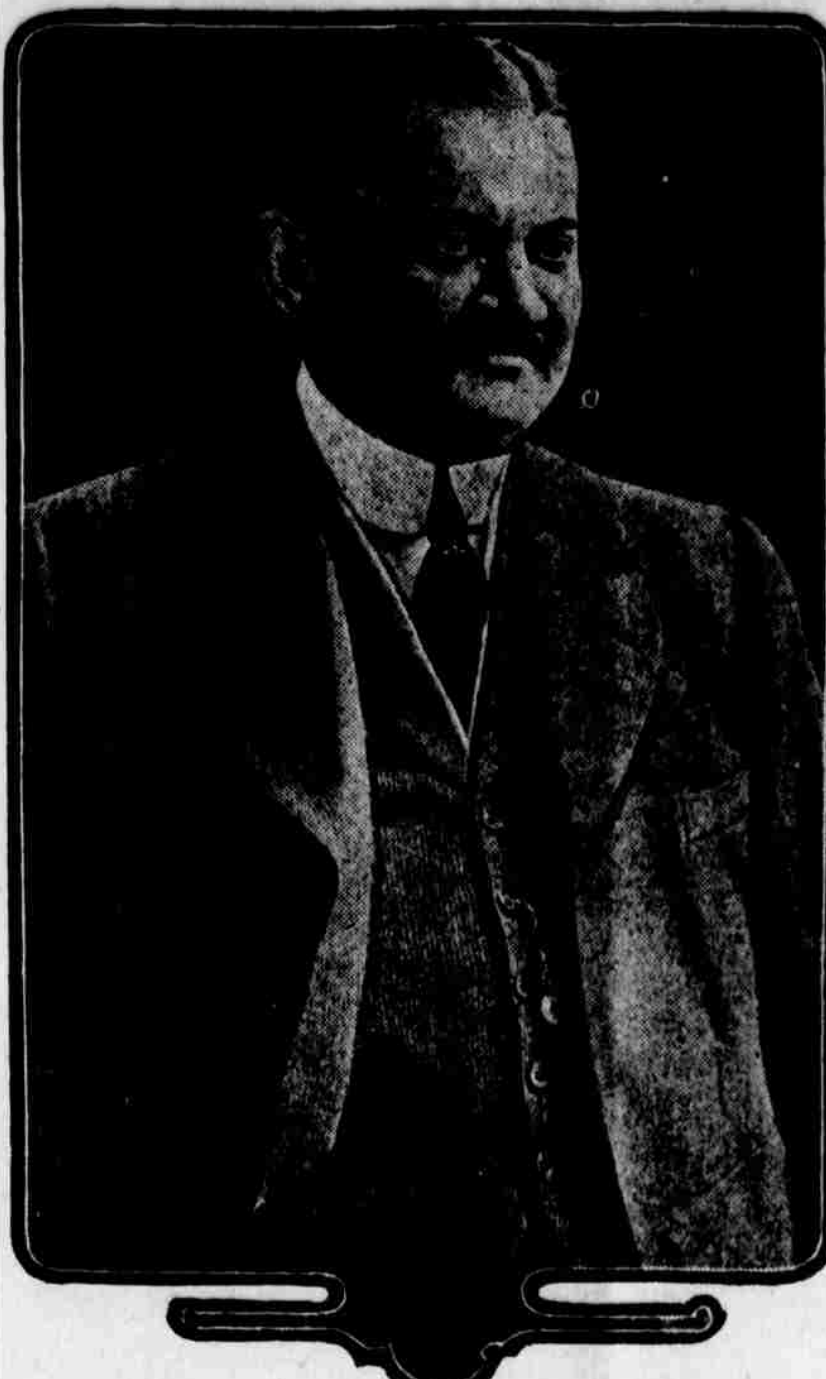

Alderman Jacob A. Hey's campaign for re-election in the twenty-third ward is meeting with enthusiasm in every part of the ward. Every meeting is packed to the doors, and citizens of all shades of political opinion are working in his behalf. Alderman Hey's council record is one of achievement and the people of his ward know it.

Every indication points to the election of Anson H. Brown to the City Council in the Thirty-first ward. The voters will not regret it. Mr. Brown is a man of ability and force, who will prove an honest and wide-awake alderman.

Frank F. Gazzolo looks like an easy winner for alderman in the Eighteenth ward. He is deservedly popular throughout the ward.

Alderman Henry Uptate will be re-elected. Citizens of the Fifteenth ward are not going to retire the honest and faithful public official.

OFFER TO PROVE BASEBALL IS CROOKED.

Garry Herrmann, Chairman of National Commission.

W. S. Forman, in the Chicago Evening Post, says: "Horace S. Fogel, whose literary efforts in the past have been submitted to Charles W. Murphy for approval before publication and whose affairs still seem to be subject to Mr. Murphy's supervision, has accepted an offer of $10,000 to write a series of articles in which he will attempt to prove that baseball is a crooked game. The announcement of Fogel's plan to syndicate a vast baseball scandal has rocked the dignitaries of big league ball to their toes. Correspondence between Garry Herrmann, chairman of the national commission, and Ben Johnson, president of the American league, shows that a determined effort will be made to muzzle Fogel and if possible to uncover the man behind him."

FOLLOWER OF TRIS SPEAKER
White-Haired Mother Has Never Lost Sight of Career of Crack Outfielder of Boston.

One fan has followed Tris Speaker's career with an interest that not the most ardent follower of baseball in Boston can approach. Knowing little or nothing about the national game, caring only for one player in any league, Speaker's mother has watched his rise, first with approval, then with a growing sympathy, and finally with pride. She travels with him whenever she can make an opportunity.

Mrs. Speaker's first active attention to baseball was paid when she spanked Tris for taking part in a game.

Tris Speaker.

The future star had set out for church, a penny in his hand, a Sunday school quarterly in the other.

Three hours later, he returned home. He was without penny or leaflet. His cap was a minus quantity, his clothes were torn and dirty, and he was no sight for a Texas Sabbath.

"I beat 'em, mudder," he was shouting, wrinkling his scratched and grimy face into a grin. "Two home runs and a single—I made 'em, an' we beat!" "Well, you don't beat 'em again on Sunday, anyway," said mudder. And forthwith she admonished chastisement.

But the spanking didn't take the baseball out of Speaker. In the Polytechnic institute at Fort Worth, he became the idol of the college fans. He came home from the institution of learning resolved on ball playing as a career.

"I'm going to be a ball player," he told his mother again. "You and brother and sisters—all eight of them—can say what you like. It's for me—and I'm for it."

It was in the grand stand at Waco,

"It is reported that Fogel is the 'god' as usual, and the real author of the proposed expose is the same gentleman who has shielded himself behind Fogel's pen on previous exciting occasions."

"Evidence which will be detailed later tends to prove Fogel is still the tool of the Taft-Murphy combination in the National league and that his actions in baseball affairs—so far as he is permitted to figure in that sport—still are subject to the instructions of the Cubs' president."

"It is not known positively that in the proposed attack on baseball he is acting under orders from either Taft or Murphy, but in the opinion of some of the men trying to head Fogel off there is ground for suspicion, at least."

Tex. that Mrs. Speaker first saw her son play. She sat in the front row, disapproving, but resigned. What the men out on the field were doing was incomprehensible to her. Someone hit the ball and ran, and sometimes the people who were watching shouted. But it didn't matter much what they did. Her boy was out there, striving for the best, and with all her heart she was wishing it for him. And it was his, finally, when the game was over "Speaker" was the name the fans shouted.

All his mother's early doubts of the advisability of his following baseball as a profession are set at rest.

Still Hopes for Baseball College. Manager Charles Carr, of the Kansas City American association team, is still working on his idea of establishing a school for baseball players at San Antonio, Texas. Carr wants the National commission to recognize his college, which he believes will do away with much of the unnecessary expense attached to the development of minor league players. He has an option on a tract of ground suitable for 15 or 20 diamonds, and can secure a hotel lease, and next winter hopes to start his project. He intends to have competent instructors in base running, pitching, fielding and all departments of the game.

Evans' Iron Jaw. Outfielder Louis Evans of the St. Louis Cardinals, should have been a pugilist. He has the build and the speed, and now comes the news that he has a granite jaw. Evans was batting one day at Pittsburgh, when Hendryx, first baseman, was twirling. Hendryx threw a splitter at Evans which lodged with a sickening thud against the jaw of the Cardinals' left fielder. Evans never winced. He felt for his jaw, gripped his teeth and a few seconds later, stepped into a fast one and nearly knocked it out of the lot.

Wagner is Optimistic. Hans Wagner does not believe that he will be relegated to the baseball junk pile just yet. Says the great Pirate shortstop: "I think I'll be able to play the coming season through and I'll try to bat around .300. Every winter the newspapers say I'm all in, but when summer comes old Hans still is able to knock out a few hits. We've got a pennant winner this year and after we've won the world's championship next fall I'm going to be married in celebration of the victory."

Another Chance for Steels. Manager Friel of the St. Paul (American association) club has taken a chance on pitcher Elmer Steele of Pittsburgh, who had some trouble with his arm last year. A visit to Bonsetter Reese is said to have put the arm in as good shape as ever.

Makes Money on Horses. For the year ending October 3, 1911, the New Zealand government received $378,955 from horse racing clubs in totalisator percentage and tax on receipts.

LARUE KIRBY'S TRIAL

Business-Like Way of Wilbur Robinson of Giants.

While Raindrops as Big as Radishes Fell and Splashed, Former Michigan State League Pitcher Was Worked Out.

An interesting story is told of how Wilbur Robinson of the New York Giants landed Pitcher Larue Kirby from the Traverse City team of the Michigan State league for McGraw, and it throws light on "Robby's" business-like way of doing things. When Robinson was sent to Traverse City he expected to watch Kirby work in a game, but it rained in Traverse City and there was no game. "I can't wait over until tomorrow," said "Robby," "and if I do, it may rain some more, so I guess I'll take you out in the rain and let you pitch to me anyhow. You do the best you can with the ball, and then I'll tell you what I think about it."

"They went forth and Kirby pitched to 'Robby,' while Michigan raindrops, which were as big as radishes, broke around them and splashed considerably."

After awhile "Robby" said that Kirby had worked long enough. "I'm hungry," remarked the New York coach. "Come on to the best restaurant in the city, and we'll have a bite."

So they went to the only marble caparisoned inn which Traverse City boasts. Never mind if the marble did look suspiciously like oilcloth. It was a clean and wholesome establishment. Outside there was an odor of pine lumber, the perfume which the traveler encounters the moment that he crosses the pine tree belt. Inside there was an odor of home-made cooking.

"I'm not looking for shrimp, lobster or squab," said "Robby." "What would you recommend?"

"The ham and eggs go pretty well," was Kirby's reply. "The ham doesn't have to be sawed to shape it to the mouth, and the eggs are home grown."

So they sat down and ate ham and eggs. Kirby ate and "Robby" ate. Then "Robby" ate and Kirby ate. All the time the young ball player was waiting to hear what the coach thought.

"That isn't quite Virginia ham," said "Robby," "but it will do. Ever eat Virginia ham? Say, boy, you've got something coming to you. Here, son," addressing the waiter, "what's the check?"

"Fifty cents for two." "Fifty cents for two! For the love of Mike, if I'd known that I'd bought some more and taken it back to the folks with me for a curiosity. Been $2.50 in New York."

Before long it was time for the train to arrive. "Robby" and Kirby went to the train. Not a word about the future.

As the locomotive whistled down the track "Robby" grabbed his traveling bag and remarked: "Say, Kirby, how long will it take you to pack up and start east?"

"An hour or so," was the reply. "Robby" didn't say a word. The train rolled into the station. "I guess you better get ready to start any time upon the receipt of a telegram," said "Robby," as he stepped up to the platform of the car. Good-by.

The telegram went the next day. Somebody asked "Robby" what Kirby had that made him look like a valuable pitcher. "I'll tell you," was the answer. "He's got one of those hook curves like that of Mordca Brown, a reverse curve that is as good as any that I ever saw, and a round arm curve that is wider than a hoghead of New Orleans sugar, and speedy with all of it. A little time and I think he will be up there pitching with any of them."

Still Hopes for Baseball College. Manager Charles Carr, of the Kansas City American association team, is still working on his idea of establishing a school for baseball players at San Antonio, Texas. Carr wants the National commission to recognize his college, which he believes will do away with much of the unnecessary expense attached to the development of minor league players. They say that Leslie Nunamaker lost his regular job by boosting Forest Cady as being the new first string catcher, while Nunamaker is third on the string.

A new circular board track will shortly be built around the Colgate university athletic field. This will give the athletes an excellent opportunity to run in all kinds of weather.

Athletes from this country will compete in the international games of the Federation of Catholic Gymnastic societies, which will be held in Rome next September.
